PREFACE

For CERES as a whole the mid-term review was the most important event in 2007. After a visit of the peer review committee of three days (February 28-March), the final report was completed in April 2007. The overall impression of the committee was quite positive. One of the committee's main conclusions was that CERES has rightly earned the academic legitimacy (formally acknowledged by the accreditation of the KNAW) that enables it to play a leading role with respect to the participating institutions, as well as in the wider institutional contexts of higher education and international development. Among the high points were mentioned the PhD-training programme especially the first year, and the fact that CERES manages to bring together and defend the common interests of a scholarly community that otherwise would have suffered serious setbacks. Also the quality and quantity of scientific performance were positively acclaimed.

Nevertheless, improvements can be made, especially in the field of renewal of the programme. For example by means of reflection within the working programmes in order to rearrange the themes and sharpen focus of the programmes, bi-annual conferences and the promotion of task forces/working groups for specific relevant and topical themes. These recommendations adequately support already existing trends made apparent through the establishment of a number of working groups, which already function under the CERES flag. A major recommendation made with respect to PhD-training was to invest more in a post fieldwork programme

2007 was also marked by the change of the scientific directorship from Ton Dietz to Han van Dijk. After 5 years of giving the best of his efforts to CERES he resigned and took a well-earned sabbatical leave in Cape Town and Rome. In a farewell ceremony, June 27 the CERES/DPRN publication "Bridging Gaps, Creating Synergies" was presented, highlighting in a nutshell many of the issues that marked much of Ton Dietz period as scientific director of CERES. Over this period, one of the major achievements was the establishment of DPRN a network of development experts and policymakers in the Netherlands and Belgium who aim to reduce the gap between science, policy and development practice. Another major achievement marking the directorship of Ton Dietz has been the elaboration and institutional consolidation of the fine-tuned valuation protocol for research valuation in CERES' working domain. This system does not only take into account scientific performance, but also values policy impact and organizational performance.

Han van Dijk is a relative newcomer in the field of management of research. He has been researcher on various assignments within the Law and Governance Group of Wageningen University and the African Studies Centre in Leiden and was appointed extraordinary professor of Law and Governance in Africa in 2004 at Wageningen University where he coordinates a research programme on Law, Governance and Natural Resources Management. Over the years, he fulfilled various positions in CERES as member and later as convenor of Working Programme 1.

His main task will be to steer CERES through its re-accreditation trajectory, due by 2010 and guide the transition of the school from its basis at the Faculty of Social Sciences and create a new hub within the Faculty of Law, Economics, Administration and Organization (REBO) of Utrecht University. For this, the gradual renewal of the research programme is of course paramount.

TRAINING

In 2007 40 new PhD's were registered. The main structure, the general framework of the CERES orientation programme was slightly adjusted this year. The result of this adjustment was that the first general part was centred on research design and the more practical elements of research training. These elements have proved to be relevant for the different types of research projects by CERES PhD candidates.

This first general (more obligatory) part of this programme took place in the period March 26 - April 12. Training elements on methodological and theoretical approaches were scheduled in the second part of the programme and consisted of a number of optional programme elements. For this part of the programme candidates were expected to select and register for at least three of the methodology sessions and at least one of the theoretical seminars. The second part of the programme was scheduled in the period 24 April – 16 May.

NEWS FROM THE LOCATIONS: The main developments in 2007 at the six founding member institutions.

Institute of Social Studies (ISS)

In 2007, ISS celebrated its 55th anniversary in the unique surroundings of the Hall of Knights. To mark the occasion, a large number of academic and cultural activities were organised including an International Symposium, titled, Cities of Extremes. This symposium focused on the city as an increasingly crucial locus for development and change with far reaching implications for its inhabitants. The two-day conference brought together key thinkers and practitioners. The thought-provoking papers and exchanges it generated will serve as a basis for a special issue of the journal Development & Change to be published in 2008. During the celebrations, ISS awarded Honorary Doctorates to Sir Richard Jolly and Prof. Bina Agarwal. In honour of the two doctorates, two workshops, titled, "The roles and relationships of the human discourses: human rights, human development, human security" and "Gender and Land Rights in Context: A Cross-Continental Conversation" were held during the anniversary week. Another event organised as part of the anniversary celebrations was a 'Day of Public Debate', during which discussions, workshops and an information market focused on Urbanisation and on Poverty & Injustice.

As of the end of the year, ISS had 66 PhD candidates and in the course of 2007, 15 PhD students successfully defended their theses. ISS staff published some two dozen books and a large number of journal articles during this period. Notably, the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize was jointly awarded to the Intergovernmental Panel for Climate Change (IPCC), rewarding news for ISS professors, Hans Opschoor and Mohamed Salih both of whom participate in the IPCC. In November 2007, ISS Professor Mohamed Salih was awarded an Honorary Doctorate by the University of Copenhagen. The nomination committee said that Professor Salih's approach to African politics is characterised by a constant reflection on theories of development and by an innovative synthesis of political science and anthropology.

The organization of research was changed in 2007. ISS identified ten research clusters on important research themes. Each cluster now comprises staff as well as PhD-students, from different backgrounds but with shared expertise. The themes are 1- Civil Society and Market; 2- Conflict, Reconstruction and Human Security; 3- Education and Development; 4- Integrated Water Management; 5- International Migration and Human Security; 6- Micro and Macro Dynamics of Poverty; 7- Middle East and North Africa; 8- Political Parties and Governance; 9- Resources Environments and Livelihoods; 10- Value Chains, Local Economic Development and Social Inclusion.

In addition, the foundation was laid for the HIVOS1-ISS Knowledge Programme Civil Society Building. This four-year programme, which started in January 2008, will improve understanding of civil society building in relation to structural changes in the power balance in society. The Knowledge Programme aims to sustain the iterative process of integrating the production, dissemination and application of knowledge on civil society building.

In August 2007, ISS began co-operating with the Centre for Migration Studies in Ghana. ISS inputs include the formulation of an agenda for migration research. ISS is actively involved in a number of research and capacity development projects in Vietnam. These include, "Upgrading the capacity of local authorities in planning and managing social-economic development in rural Vietnam" and co-operation with the Ho Chi Minh National Academy of Politics and Public Administration (HCMA) for cooperation in jointly organizing seminars and conferences, the exchange of visiting lecturers, and the provision of mutual support in developing relations with third parties.

CERES at Radboud University Nijmegen (Cultural Anthropology and Development Studies)

On the 23rd of May Prof. Ruerd Ruben delivered his inaugural address on the topic 'Development through Cooperation: New alliances at the crossroad of aid and trade chains' accepting his appointment as Chair of Development Studies at CIDIN. This marked the beginning of a new period for CIDIN. The new research programme for 2007-2011 was launched entitled 'Institutional

Arrangements in Development: Poverty alleviation, participation and empowerment'. Within this programme interconnections between North and South, political, economic and policy processes, between institutions and actors etc are put in the centre of attention.

Five PhD-candidates defended their thesis in 2007 on a variety of topics, ranging from microfinance and gender, sexual behaviour, mango supply chains, property rights and investment behaviour towards the evaluation of aid.

The number of students enrolled in the Postdoctoral Programme Development Studies (PDOO) continues to grow. No less than 33 students started the new course in January. CIDIN's involvement in the IS-academy was continued by the appointment of Lucie van Schendel on a research project concerning data analysis of NGO-projects funded by Dutch embassies. Thomas de Hoop was appointed as PhD-student for research on impact assessment of NGO programmes, funded by CORDAID. This research also forms part of the IS Academy research programme on Civil Society. A major IS-academy activity took place in The Hague on October 22 and 23 at the CIDIN-DGIS Expert Meeting 'Improving the Aid Architecture: Visions and Experiences of Southern Civil Society' with the presence of ten leading southern experts.

CERES-member Prof. Hoebink continued his leading role in the SANPAD-board and co-chaired the SANPAD Poverty Conference in South Africa in June.

In 2007 the anthropology section of the Department of Anthropology and Development Studies found itself in a period of transition. Several senior staff members did already retire over the past few years, and in 2007 the two chair holders in the Department also retired or announced their retirement. Prof. Borsboom retired from the chair of Pacific anthropology as of May 1st, 2007, while Prof. Hüsken announced his retirement from the general chair of social and cultural anthropology as of July 1st, 2008 (although the latter will continue to hold a small contract for PhD supervision). Not all positions will be refilled. The formerly full-time chair of Pacific anthropology held by Borsboom will be refilled only with a 0.5 position.

In 2007 dr. Venbrux also left the department to take up a chair in the anthropology of religion in the Faculty of Religion Studies, and he was not replaced either. Against the background of other staff members who were not replaced after their retirement over the past few years, the anthropological staff in the department has been reduced drastically.

In spite of all these setbacks, remaining staff members continue to work hard to keep Nijmegen on the map. A very successful research programme on Marian pilgrimages funded by the NWO programme entitled 'The Future of the Religious Past' was terminated with an international conference in February 2007. At the same time, funding for a new programme on 'Gender, Nation and Religious Diversity in Force at European Pilgrimage Sites' was awarded by NORFACE (New Opportunities for Research Funding Agency Co-operation in Europe). Finally, staff members also organised a range of seminars and sessions at international conferences.

CERES at Utrecht University (Department of Cultural Anthropology, Utrecht School of Governance)

The year 2007 was eventful for the Utrecht University participation in CERES. A number of developments and events occurred that, in overall terms, increased the embeddedness of CERES in local and national academic structures and initiatives, and the recognition of its scholarly work. The Cultural Anthropology based IS-Academy programme was consolidated this year, with the start of two new PhD projects (South Africa and Mozambique) and an additional project that involves a PhD candidate from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. This means that the IS Academy is now in full swing.

The year 2007 also saw the preparations for the development of a research master programme, the central theme of which is firmly rooted in the CERES scholarly landscape. The research master programme will focus on the anthropological analysis of the relation between cultural diversity and power within processes of socio-cultural transformation. This analytical focus is considered essential for understanding why strong globalization forces fail to result in increasing social and cultural homogeneity, and why political tensions and violent conflicts erupt or persist under these circumstances. The research master proposal will be submitted to the relevant authorities in the course of 2008. It is hoped that a start with the actual programme can be made in 2009. The initiative for this research master builds on the peer review of the Department of Cultural Anthropology's research programme 'Political Conflict, Cultural Trauma, and Social Reconstruction' (CTR) in 2007. The assessment of the international evaluation committee was very positive with three out of five criteria (research programme, quality and relevance) scoring between very good and excellent and the two remaining criteria (productivity and vitality) scoring very well. The research programme was also strengthened in 2007 with the appointment of a new chair on 'Ethnicity and Conflict'. Based on its proven quality and relevance, the members of CTR participate in the Utrecht University-wide focus area on Conflicts and Human Rights. Within this context, CERES Utrecht and CERES as a whole have started negotiations with the Utrecht based research school on Human Rights about collaboration in the fields of PhD training programmes and research.

The members of the Utrecht School of Governance part of CERES participated in three university wide focus areas: Cultures and Identities, Coordinating Societal Change, Origins and Impacts of Institutions. The Utrecht School of Governance CERES contingent used this year to make the necessary preparations for the peer review exercise planned for 2008. The Utrecht School of Governance saw in 2007 the installation of Utrecht University's first endowed chair, the Richard Krajcicek chair for sports and multiculturalism. Prof. Dr. Paul Verweel is holder of the chair.

In 2007, Utrecht University hosted the yearly CERES Summerschool, which was entitled 'Between recognition and redistribution: (multi)culture(s) and conflict in a globalizing world'. The organizing committee invited CERES members to propose panels and individual papers that dealt with themes or topics that pertain to the proper domains of either multiculturalism or conflict studies, and to the complex connections that exist between different forms of cultural pluralism, inequality, exclusion, poverty, redistributive struggles and conflict. The Summerschool was well attended and hosted several renowned scholars in the fields of multiculturalism and social conflict. It also experimented with master classes for CERES PhD students. Finally, 2007 saw the successful defence of a number of CERES PhD theses.

University of Amsterdam (UvA-AMIDST: Amsterdam Metropolitan Institute for Development Studies)_

2007 was a successful year for CERES at AMIDSt. Four PhDs graduated within the Livelihood, Environment and Governance (LEG) section at AMIDSt, LEG is structured around three key themes (metropolitan governance, rural development, education) while crosscutting themes (transnationalism, people and the sea) were further stimulated in 2007. The LEG-group produced 18 peer-reviewed journal articles and 16 peer-reviewed book chapters. Members of LEG participated in various international conferences and were involved in organising of them.

Two PhD theses were defended in the LEG-theme Metropolitan Governance; one on Home-based enterprises and Caribbean urban livelihoods by Hebe Verrest, which emphasized the distinction between business- and household oriented entrepreneurs and those who are very vulnerable and those less vulnerable. Udan Fernando defended his thesis on the uneasy relationship between Sri Lankan NGOs and their Dutch donor NGOs, showing clearly that the rhetoric of partnership and equality does not exist on the ground, and that gate-keepers on both sides are important in determining the strength and flexibility of the relationships. Isa Baud and Joop de Wit (from ISS) completed their IDPAD-funded research programme on New Forms of Urban governance in India with a conference in Delhi, and the manuscript for the book of the same name was accepted by Sage for publication.

Professor Ton Dietz was awarded an Honorary Doctorate by the Moi University in Eldoret for his long-term involvement in university collaboration (MHO programme) which led to staff upgrading and development of joint research projects. Lothar Smith and Mirjam Kabki defended their theses in the area of transnationalism. Both their research (as part of a NWO funded project) focused on the transnational relations of Ghanaian migrants living in Amsterdam. The programme, led by Valentina Mazzucato, hosted the "Transnational Links and Livelihoods" research group (2005-present), a CERES-wide group of junior and senior researchers conducting transnational research from a livelihoods perspective. This was one of the spin-off projects of the CERES pathways initiative.

The MARE/Coastal Lowlands group within LEG organized its fourth 'People and the Sea' conference in Amsterdam in July 2007 under the banner of 'Who owns the coast?'. This biennial conference – which was co-funded by KNAW, the Ministry of Agriculture, Nature and Food Safety, and CERES – brought together 120 social scientists from different parts of the world. The conference included keynote addresses by professors Daniel Bromley (University of Indiana), Bonnie McCay (Rutgers University) and Yoshiaki Matsuda (Kagoshima University) and was generally held to be successful. It was preceded by a policy day on the social implications of Marine Protected Areas. The MARE/Coastal Lowlands group within LEG has four PhD students, working on various marine and coastal topics in different parts of the world. Topics and regions include water management in the Netherlands, marine commodity chains in the Caribbean, and fisheries governance in Sri Lanka and Ghana. MARE was also in charge of coordinating the social science section of a EU-funded 6th framework project (acronym ECOST) on modelling the costs and benefits of capture fisheries. The MARE/Coastal Lowlands group also participated in a SANPAD-funded project on fisheries compliance in South Africa, as well as in a research evaluation of the possibilities of a fisheries buy-back programme in India.

The LEG crosscutting theme on Education and International Development, working within the context of the IS Academe-Quality Education, recruited five new PhDs. In addition, two major events were organized during 2007 within the framework of this programme. The first event took place in Amsterdam, Feb 26th & 27th, 2007 on Conflict, Education and the Global South: Towards a Critical Research Agenda. This conference brought together leading academics, policy-makers and practitioners working in the emerging field of Education and Conflict and was attended by over 100 people. The conference was linked to a broader research project on the topic led jointly by AMIDST, UNESCO-IIEP, the Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs Education and Research Division and the International Rescue Committee, the results of which will be published in a two volume publication in 2008. The second event was a one-day Expert Meeting on Education Decentralization held in Scheveningen on October 3, 2007.

Free University Amsterdam (VU) Social Cultural Anthropology (SCA), and Culture Organization and Management (COM)

The year 2007 was the year of the peer review, the five-yearly audit every university Department and Faculty in the Netherlands has to face. The official verdict on the research programme of SCA reads: There is a commendable balance between maintaining programme coherence and developing a framework that encompasses all the individual projects within the department ... There has also been admirable attention on the part of the members of this department to publish in a variety of languages and in regional and national journals produced in the societies under study ... [O]verall, the quality of this group is evaluated as very good.... The scores were a 4 on quality, a 4.5 on productivity, a 5 on relevance and a 4 on viability. In 2007, the Department welcomed Henk Schulte Nordholt as its new special chair

Two of our PhD-candidates, Tam Ngo and Scott Dalby, organized – with support from their supervisors Prof. Oscar Salemink and Prof. Peter van der Veer – a successful international conference on 'Religion, Ethnicity and Nation-states in a Globalizing World' on June 7/8. In her public keynote speech, during the conference 'Shaking up citizenship' which also served as the 18th national 'Globaliseringslezing', Saskia Sassen conveyed her vision – a concise summary of her latest work Territory, Authority, Rights – standing on the pulpit of the Singelkerk in Amsterdam. Sassen argued that globalisation is best understood as 'denationalisation'. While the nature and role of state institutions are changing, the nation state itself is not –unlike other scholars claim and popular opinion often has it–a disappearing project. On Saturday 21, the event proceeded with, among others, keynote speeches, by Peter Spiro, Nicolas De Genova, Martin Lodge. On 27 November, a symposium took place to mark Thomas Hylland Eriksen's farewell. It was titled Beyond Relativism, and took up the challenge to explore the possibility (and even the necessity, if anthropologists really want to be 'engaged', committed scientists, in a globalizing world) to radically say farewell to the relativist doctrine. Based on a scheme of brief statement-like lectures, round-table debate and workshops, it was a tremendous success, counting with the enthusiastic participation of hundreds of students among the audience.

The most important CERES-project at the Communication Organization and Management Group in 2007 was on 'Farm Dwellers, the Forgotten People? Consequences of Conversions to Private Wildlife

Production in KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape by Marja Spierenburg and Harry Wels, which was rewarded as an Integrated Project NWO-WOTRO. This project addresses the role of the private sector in conservation and development. In South Africa, especially in the provinces of KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape, a growing trend to convert commercial farms to wildlife-based forms of land-use is apparent. The proposed project seeks to explore the impacts of these conversions on farm dwellers; i.e. farm labourers, (former) labour and rent-paying tenants and their families. Two studies using surveys among a limited sample of managers of private game reserves seem to indicate that the demand for labour increases after conversion and that wages increase as well. However, rural NGOs report a significant increase in evictions of farm dwellers because of farm conversions. The proposed project aims to study the impacts of conversions on farm dwellers in more detail, taking into account the diversity of wildlife-based forms of land-use.

Research will be conducted to determine the driving forces behind the conversions, the scale and extent of the trend in KwaZulu-Natal and the Eastern Cape, and the economics of the different forms of wildlife production – including private game reserves, hunting operations, and venison production. Research will be conducted among wildlife producers, their representatives, and the relevant – local and national – government departments to gain insights into the driving forces and the policy environment in which wildlife producers operate. It is expected that different forms of wildlife production will have differential social and livelihood impacts on farm dwellers.

Besides this successful NWO-project, Harry Wels and Saskia Stehouwer organized a Youth Day symposium at 16 June attended by Archbishop Em. Desmond Tutu from South Africa, who accepted a VU University Chair on Youth, Sport and Reconciliation to bear his name, Amsterdam, VU University. This event can be seen as the start of a new, inter-faculty research at the VU on youth, sport and reconciliation in South Africa.

In 2007 the Dutch Ministry of Justice funded a project Eergerelateerd geweld (Honour related violence). This project will be supervised by Prof. Halleh Ghorashi and Prof. Marcel Veenswijk and executed by a senior researcher, a PhD-candidate and a post-doc. The focus in this project is on the question whether organizations work together to prevent honour related violence from happening and how the voices of those involved in this violence are heard. This project fits into Ghorashi's research on integration and management of diversity and Veenswijk's research on the culture of private-public organizational chains. The research is conducted in close cooperation with practitioners in the field.

CERES at Wageningen University 2007

2007 was a busy year for CERES in Wageningen. A total number of 24 new PhD candidates was registered, of which 20 are international candidates. There were 12 graduations; one of them was a joint interdisciplinary project with the Wageningen Institute of Animal Sciences (WIAS).

The increasing focus on interdisciplinary research was visible in two important CERES PhD events. The Learning Workshop 'Competencies for Integrated Agricultural Research' coordinated by Conny Almekinders (Technology and Agrarian Development Group) brought CERES candidates and candidates from technical graduate schools together to strengthen their individual competencies to become effective team players in interdisciplinary and multi-stakeholder research processes. The goals of the learning workshop were to improve participants' understanding their role in socio-technological processes; to understand human interactions and their own performance in research-related collaboration with other stakeholders and to assess theoretical concepts and associated tools to improve performance.

The second important event in interdisciplinary research was the PhD course 'Complexity in and between Social and Ecosystems' jointly organized by CERES-Wageningen, the C.T. de Wit Graduate School for Production Ecology and Resource Conservation (PE&RC) and Studium Generale. The aim of the course was to develop a theoretical perspective on complex dynamics in and between social and eco-systems. The course hosted a variety of Wageningen faculty members and distinguished guest speakers, who delved into existing theories and combinations of ecological, social science, institutional, and evolutionary concepts. The course participants - a mixture of social and technical scientists - critically reflected on the differences between models, theory and experiments; and analyzed sudden and catastrophic regime changes; situations of uncertainty and non linear behaviour; and the adaptive influences of scientific and indigenous knowledge.

The inaugural lecture of Thea Hilhorst in April marked the beginning of a considerable rise in the number of research projects in the area of conflict and disaster studies. Under the banner of Working Programme 5 Gemma van der Haar and Bram Jansen (Disaster Studies group), Yurdi Yasmi (Forest and Nature Conservation Policy Group), and Esther Roquas (CERES-Wageningen) jointly organized a seminar series 'Looking Through the Lens of Crisis: Disruption, Normality, and Change'. The central theme of this seminar series was the distinction between 'crisis' and 'normality' and the discursive constructions behind these terms and how different understandings of crisis and normality influence planned intervention. The seminars featured both Wageningen researchers and PhD candidates and guest lecturers.

Within the framework of the World Water Day the Irrigation and Water Engineering Group headed by Linden Vincent organized a seminar on 'Water for Food, Water for Life. A Comprehensive Assessment of Water Management in Agriculture' in cooperation with the International Water Management Institute (IWMI). The seminar discussed the Comprehensive Assessment report on the acute freshwater challenge facing humanity over the coming 50 years.

Arturo Escobar - Kenan Distinguished Teaching Professor of Anthropology, UNC-Chapel Hill - joint the Rural Development Sociology Group and CERES-Wageningen for a two month sabbatical stay. Together with Pieter de Vries Professor Escobar organized three PhD workshops in which he discussed recent major issues with PhD candidates: on biodiversity, territoriality and culturality; alternative modernities and alternatives to modernity; and post-capitalist politics. He held a seminar on Place, Development and Modernity and the annual CERES-Wageningen lecture on Territories of Difference Social Movements, Development, and Conservation. Furthermore he was able to join a broader event organized by the Rural Development Sociology Group and Disaster Studies in collaboration with the National Heritage Foundation "Hotel De Wereld" on 'Territory and Conflict in the Colombian Pacific: Cultural strategies against armed violence, forced displacement, and coca cultivation'.

The CEPIP committee that allocates the strategic research funds of CERES-Wageningen to new and innovative research projects organized a post-doc writing grant competition. Three applicants received a one year CERES writing grant to write publications on the basis of their PhD research: Kei Otsuki (Rural Development Sociology Group), Alex Bolding (Irrigation and Water Engineering Group) and Dominic Glover (Technology and Agrarian Development Group).
